

Visit to Salisbury Playhouse

23 February 2012

A group of members went by coach to the matinee performance at Salisbury Playhouse to see “Design for Living” by Noel Coward.

It was an unusual play with a different story than others experienced in past years. The actors and actresses did remarkably well and were able to remember their lines without any apparent hitch. That was very impressive!

Overall it was an enjoyable day with good weather which offered the opportunity to wander around Salisbury in the morning, do some shopping and then to have lunch at one of the many established restaurants, hotels, pubs etc. Such outings always provide pleasure as they do offer the chance for growing fellowship and friendship.
